I'm applying for the Middle SEO role. I'm a software engineer, and I currently run content operations for an adult digital-media client, where I also build the tools the workflow uses: Python image processing and review tools, browser extensions for capture and curation, and automated duplicate detection.

Previously I spent seven years in software engineering roles. At iStreamPlanet I worked on React/TypeScript and Go/Node APIs for a large-scale live video platform. With Redfin's Brand Awareness team in 2017 and 2018, I worked on performance, accessibility, and SEO for their consumer site, and on an earlier engagement I rebuilt a number of their customer-facing marketing pages.

Earlier in my career, a partner and I built and ran a network of about 20 adult web properties, including freepicspage.com. I handled most of the SEO, SEM, purchased traffic, and link development. We grew revenue from $0 to $240K in two years through affiliate marketing and geo-targeting.

My current hands-on SEO work is on muffinpanrecipes.com, which began as an experiment in using AI APIs to build a cast of characters who talk to each other. Each weekly recipe includes a conversation among the characters. I later expanded the site into a technical SEO project: a dynamic sitemap covered by tests, Recipe and BreadcrumbList structured data, a WebSite and Organization graph, and self-referencing canonicals that resolve duplicate URL paths. I use Search Console, GA4, Screaming Frog, and Ahrefs to monitor and audit it.

Separately, I built an ingest pipeline and an agent workflow for automated contradiction detection at hypocrisynowinc.com.

My recent SEO work has been on my own sites rather than in a dedicated SEO role at a company, and I have not run hreflang or country-specific search at your scale.

I have worked fully remote since 2019. I would like to talk about the role.
